ALARIC; OR THE TYRANT'S VAULT.

A SICILIAN STORY OF EARLY TIMES.

CHAPTER I.

ALARIC.

Not far from the city of Syracuse, when it was the metropolis of all Sicily, an object of longing to ambitious conquerors, and one of the finest cities in the world; not far from this place, upon the shore of the sea, stood a man who had just landed from a vessel that was now sailing away towards the North. He was quite young—not over five-and-twenty—tall and well-proportioned; with a muscular system finely developed, and possessing a face not only striking in its manly beauty, but remarkable, in one so young, for its stern, resolute, and self reliant expression. His dress was light and simple, and evidently of Greek manufacture, the lower limbs being clothed in close-fitting goat skin, above which he wore a shirt of white linen, confined at the waist by a belt of fine mail. Upon his head was a cap of woven stuff, the top drooping over the right ear, and his feet were shielded by a pair of sandals. His only weapon was a short, heavy sword, which hung, in a leathern scabbard, from his belt of mail. He stood for awhile, gazing about, as though undecided what course he should pursue, but finally he espied an old fisherman, not far off, who had just come down upon the beach, and towards him he made his way.

"A bright, pleasant morning, good sir," said the youth.

The old man cast his net from his shoulders and gazed up. He carefully scanned the features before him, and then replied,

"Aye, fair sir, 'tis a pleasant morning. We have many such on this coast."

"And yet it storms sometimes, I suppose," suggested the first speaker.

"He is a wise man who little heeds the storms he cannot quell," said the fisherman, with a nod of the head which seemed to give his words more meaning than the circumstances under which they were spoken would imply.

"You are right there," responded the other.—"But tell me—where can I find Artabanus, the hermit?"

The fisherman took another careful look into his interlocutor's face, and then answered,

"He lives upon yonder mountain which is called Catalano. Do you wish to see him?"

"Yes."

"Then follow the path that leads to yonder cot until it brings you to a small stream. Cross that, and then upon your right hand you will see a beaten track. He lives in a cave near the top of the mountain, and this track will lead you directly thither."

The young man thanked his informant, and was upon the point of turning away, when the latter resumed:

"I mean no offence. Your face looks familiar. It has the cast of a countenance I fancied I had seen before."

"You'll at least remember of having seen such an one on this morning," said the young man, as he thus spoke he turned away.

"Aye," muttered the old fisherman, half to himself, but yet loud enough to reach other ears; "and I call on Neptune to witness that I have seen it before. Such faces are not multiplied—they are not plenty in Syracuse these times. Aye, las! more's the pity."

The youth hesitated for a moment, as though he would turn back, but he overcame the disposition, and kept on. When he had begun to ascend the mountain he stopped and looked behind him, and saw that the fisherman was already upon the water.

"Can it be," he said, to himself, "that my face is so little changed? I think I remember that old man, for he has spread his nets long in these waters, but how should he remember me? I pray the gods that there be not many in Syracuse that yet be so observant."

With this the traveller kept on up the mountain until he had reached a broad table of rock, from whence he could see the bay, and the city beyond. The great metropolis was spread out before him, with its massive walls, its temples, and its palaces, and a tear started down his cheek as he gazed upon the scene. He clasped his hands upon his bosom, and with a few muttered words, he started on again. He crossed the stream, and took the path to which he had been directed, but he did not follow it as one who was a stranger to its windings. He pursued his way with an ease and assurance, and, at times, with an abstractedness which could have been indulged in only by one who knew well the way he was going. Up the steep, rocky height he climbed, and, when he finally stopped, it was before the entrance to a cave—a cave which nature had fashioned in the mountain's side, and sheltered from the sun's fervid heat and the fury of the storm. At the mouth of this cavern sat an old man, over whose head some fourscore years had rolled. His hair and beard were white as the fleecy cloud that sailed above the mount, and floated in silken, wavy masses over his shoulders and breast. A mantle of gray cloth enveloped his frame, and his feet were shod with heavy sandals. He was engaged over an old manuscript but as he heard the sound of approaching footsteps he closed the volume and raised his head.

"Kind father, greet thee," the youth returned, at the same time extending his hand.

"How!" cried the aged man, starting to his feet, as the accents fell upon his ear. He shaded his eyes with the palm of his left hand, and gazed eagerly into his visitor's face. "Do I see aright?" he added. "Is it Alaric—my old pupil?"

"Aye, good Artabanus, I am Alaric—come once more to see thee."

For some time the hermit gazed into the young man's face in silence, but finally he said,

"Sit down, sit down, my son. Thy presence has started a host of varied emotions to life within me, and I must recover my thoughts ere I can talk with thee in reason."

"Thank the gods, I find thee alive and in health," replied the youth, as he let go the old man's hand, and took a seat upon a wooden bench close by.

"Aye—I am well in body," returned Artabanus. "But," he added thoughtfully, continuing to gaze earnestly into his companion's face as he spoke, "the body is but a small part of man, and the ills of the flesh are very joys when compared with some of the pains to which the soul may be subject. But tell me of thyself. Where hast thou been?"

"I have been in Greece," replied the youth,—"When I fled from these shores, eight years ago, I sought refuge there, and there I have remained ever since. Oh! I wept this morning, as I gazed down upon the city of my birth. I had thought I had done weeping over those memories, but when I again gazed upon Syracuse they came crowding upon me with a power which I could not resist. I saw the very temple beneath the walls of which my father and my brother were slain; and I could see the roof beneath which my mother died. Artabanus, there were not many of the patrician families escaped that foul butchery."

"No, Alaric. Of all who were loyal to the true interests of the people, I have seen only yourself return. There were a few escaped, but not many. Were there any went with you to Greece?"

"No, father. I escaped alone. I saw my noble parent cut down—I saw my brother fall—and when I knew I had no relative left in the city, I fled. Fortune favored me. I found a small boat by the sea shore, and I put out alone upon the dark waters. I floated away to Malta, and from thence I gained a passage to Greece. The tyrant still reigns in Syracuse?"

"Alas! yes. And his deeds are evil and the people suffer. We have had no peace in Sicily since good Hellanus died. Thou wert but a mere child then?"

"I was seven years old. I remember the good king well, for my father, you know, was one of his chief officers."

"Aye; you were older than I thought," said the hermit, musingly.

"And I remember there was some mystery connected with the good king's death," remarked Alaric. "Am I not right?"

"There was not much mystery," answered the old man. "He was weak and weary, and he left the throne that he might die in peace, and death soon came to him. But why hast thou returned to Syracuse?"

"Can you not guess?" returned the youth.

"I might guess many things, my son."

"And yet but one of them would be right. I have said that I left no relatives behind me when I made my escape from this place; but I did leave one whom I loved—one about whom my affections were entwined with a life that could not die. You know of whom I speak."

"Aye—you speak of the mason's daughter, Ianthe."

"Yes, father. Is she alive?"

"She is."

"And well?"

"She is well."

"And," pursued the youth, in a more eager tone, "is she still free?"

"Why? Have you thought that she would remember you in love through the years that have passed?"

"O! do not tell me that she has ceased to love me. True, she was a child in years, but I loved her then, and my love has grown stronger in the separation which has followed. I know there is danger to me here, but I came with a will to meet it."

"But suppose your very life were in danger if you sought the maiden?"

"You may warn me of danger, if you will, but do not seek to place the barrier of fear between me and my desires for I know not the emotion.—You, Artabanus, taught me when I was a boy, and your wise lessons have not departed from my mind. You taught me that there are many things more to be feared than death, and I have come prepared rather to die than live all alone in a distant land, with the sad memories of my unhappy country for my only inheritance."

"And you would not turn from death, should it raise its threatening front between yourself and Ianthe?" The old man's gaze grew more earnest as he thus spoke, and a spark, within which seemed to gleam some newly awakened hope, burned in his eye.

"My father," answered Alaric with a flushing cheek, "I could almost feel offended did I think you doubted me, but I do not think so. Show me that Ianthe loves me, and not even Pyrrho himself, with the blood stained crown of Sicily upon his brow, shall have power to startle me from my course, while life is mine."

Artabanus started to his feet and grasped the youth by the hand.

"Noble Alaric," he cried, with a joyful enthusiasm, "thou art worthy of the maiden's hand. She does love thee—she cherishes thy memory within her heart as the most precious thing of earth, and for long years she has lived upon the hope that thou wouldst return to her."

"O—the gods be praised!" ejaculated the young man.

"But," added the hermit, in a changed voice, "there must be danger in thy path. Pyrrho holds his throne only through the fear and enslavement of the people, and he knows it. Your father was one of his bitterest enemies, and he was also one of the first whom the usurper found it necessary to put out of the way. You are not only the very image of your noble parent, but you must remember that you had arrived almost at the full stature of manhood when you fled from Syracuse.—You were then seventeen, and from seventeen to five and twenty, especially in one so early developed as you were, there is not much change. You were a man then, and you are no more now. So you must expect that you will be known and recognized. But let us speak of that hereafter.—First, do you see Ianthe, and when you have found all right in that quarter, we will consider further."

"I shall find her with her father?"

"Yes—and his house is just where it was eight years ago."

"I will go and seek her, then, and—"

"Hold, my son. You had better wait till night fall ere you enter the city, and also exchange that Greek shirt for a garment less likely to attract attention, for I assure you that too much care cannot be taken."

Alaric was impatient to see Ianthe, but he saw the force of the hermit's reasoning, and he was willing to wait. So he sat down by his old teacher's side again—sat as he had sat years before, when receiving instructions from the same lips—and listened to the story of the wrongs that had been done in Sicily during the last eight years. Hour after hour passed away, and Artabanus had still more to tell of the tyrant's cruelty.

"Merciful heavens!" cried the youth, fired almost to phrensy by the recital, "how have the people borne all this?"

"They have borne it under fear of their lives. Pyrrho's soldiers are posted at every place where a murmur can arise."

"And how long shall it last?"

"Till some spirit with a heart big enough to love Sicily more than life, and a soul that fears not the tyrant, shall arise in Syracuse!" pronounced the old man solemnly.

Alaric started as he met the glance of his aged companion, for there was a meaning upon it of more than mortal import. He dared not trust himself to speak then, for the feelings that had sprung to life in his own soul were so wild and strange that they fairly started him. He arose and walked out upon the mountain, and ever and anon, as his eye rested upon the distant city, the tumult in his soul came to startle him again. He did not seek to analyze the emotion, for it was so bold and gigantic, so genie-like in its misty proportions that he dared not handle it with reason.

"Alaric," spoke the old man, "it is waxing late, and we may be on the move. Let us eat a crust of bread, and then we will descend the mountain together. I must go with you as far as the fisherman's cot, for there we must find a more fitting garb for you. Glycon is my friend, and may be trusted to the verge of the grave."

The frugal supper was soon dispatched, and then the two descended the mountain together. At the fisherman's cot they stopped, and found that Glycon had just returned from his day's labor. Artabanus took him apart, and having explained to him as much of Alaric's story as he deemed advisable, he asked for some garments that would answer for the youth to wear.

The fisherman led the way to his scanty wardrobe, and the necessary garments were soon selected. Alaric's leggings of goat skin were re-placed by long hose of blue cloth, and his white linen shirt was exchanged for a dark brown frock, beneath which he could easily conceal his short sword. After this the hermit accompanied him to the southern shore of the bay, and there stopped.

"We had better not be seen together beyond this point," said the old man. "From here the way is plain, and you have had caution enough. At the gate you will not be stopped unless some of the guard should take the whim to question you. Be wise, now, and cautious, and let me see you to-morrow."

"I will not forget."

"Then may the gods guide and protect you." With this Artabanus turned back towards the mountain, and Alaric kept on. The shades of night were gathering over the city as the youth passed in at the broad gateway, and the guard had already lighted their torches. He had gone a few steps when a rough voice commanded him to stop.

"Didn't you promise me a fish for my dinner, thou lying knave?" the voice continued.

"You have mistaken your man," said Alaric, hiding his face as much as possible, without seeming desirous so to do.

"Good Bacchus, so I have. Thou'rt not Mestor."

"No," returned our hero; and as he spoke he kept on.

"That's a strange face," said one of the soldiers.

"And, I thought, a fair one," said another.

"How now?" asked a third. "Has a stranger passed?"

"Yes—a fisherman."

"'Tis said that a Greek vessel was upon the coast this morning, and we should know whom she landed?"

Alaric heard no more. He turned the first angle in the street that presented itself, and then hurried on. The way was familiar, and he had no difficulty in selecting the various avenues he needed to follow, but he was not wholly easy. He had reason to believe that he was followed. He took several winding passages for the purpose of avoiding pursuers, but he could not get rid of the echoing foot fall that sounded upon the pavement behind him. It slackened when he slackened—it stopped when he stopped—and when he hurried on the echo hurried after him.

CHAPTER II.

IANTHE—AN ALARM.

Within a comfortably furnished apartment of an humble abode, near the western wall of the city, sat two individuals. The first was a man some fifty years of age, stout and muscular in frame, and wearing the garb of an artisan, with the dust of toil still clinging to him. He possessed an open, kindly countenance, and if it lacked in comeliness, it certainly made up in honesty and frankness. Such was Bellerus, one of the most skillful masons in Syracuse, and possessing a fair knowledge of architecture in its higher and more elaborate branches. A genial comfortable disposition had led him into society of his own choice, and an antipathy to turmoil and strife, and an unwillingness to assume much responsibility, had kept him from rising to any eminence in his profession. There may have been another cause for his retaining his humble position, though every desire of his social life seemed to be answered where he was.

The other person—the mason's companion—was a female. She had seen just twenty summers, and was as beautiful as the poet's dream. In form she was light and graceful. Her limbs full and round, and her whole frame full of life and vigor. Her features were of the Grecian mould, with large dark eyes, over which drooped long lashes of silken texture, while a mass of wavy tresses clustered about her superbly rounded shoulders. Beyond the few honest friends who sometimes partook of the artisan's hospitality, she was not known. Bellerus had guarded her with a miser's care, and few there were in the great metropolis who knew of the treasure of beauty that dwelt within his walls. The humble craftsmen who shared her father's confidence, loved her devotedly, but they loved her with a worshipping love, as the kneeling shepherd loved his goddess, and they were all pledged not to speak of her in their intercourse with the outside world.

"Don't call me foolish, father," said the maiden imploringly.

"I do not call thee so, Ianthe," the mason returned. "I only wish to help you over what may prove a most bitter disappointment. How can you hope that Alaric will ever return?"

"My love tells me so."

"Ah—but love is blind."

"Then its feelings are the more to be relied upon, for they come from the internal promptings of the soul. But I feel sure that he will come back to me. Only last night the bright goddess Electra appeared to me in a dream, and told me that Alaric should return. At least I will hope yet a little while longer, for it is sweet to hope."

Bellerus could not find it in his heart to do more towards dispelling the bright promise which the maiden cherished, and he turned the conversation upon another topic. Only a few words had been spoken, however, when a loud rap was heard without, and the host lighted a torch and went to the door. When he returned he made a motion for Ianthe to leave the room.

"It is a stranger," he said, "and it is not meet that thou shouldst be present."

But the maiden neither spoke nor moved.—She had heard the tones of the visitor's voice, and her quick ear had caught a familiar sound.

Bellerus would have reminded her again, but the stranger was close behind him, and quickly entered the apartment. Ianthe saw not the humble fisher's garb—she only saw the well-remembered features which she had carried within the sacred repository of her affections for so long a time. They were changed a little—they had assumed more of manhood—but not changed to love.

"Sweet Electra! my dream is true!" she cried, as she started forward and put forth her hands. "Alaric has come!"

"So Heaven looks down with richest blessing!" the young man responded, as he folded the maiden to his bosom.

"May the gods preserve me!" exclaimed the old mason, gazing upon the youthful pair in wonder. "I hope this is no trick of Thaumus to blind me. Alaric, is't thou?"

"In truth, good Bellerus, it is," returned our hero, extending his hand as he spoke.—"Surely thou shouldst know me."

"Aye, and I do know thee now," the host responded, grasping the youth warmly, and gazing eagerly into his face. "By the crown of Pluto, I could not mistake that face. Thou art grown wondrously like thy noble father."

The trio were soon seated, and when they had regained somewhat of their composure, Alaric gave a brief account of his adventures during his absence from Sicily. Ianthe sat all the while with her head upon his bosom, and ever and anon lifting her eyes to catch the warm glances of his love.

At length the old craftsman went out, and the lovers were left alone. They told over the tales of affection they used to tell in other years, and for an hour the world was shut out from their thoughts.

"O!" murmured Ianthe, after Alaric had imprinted a warm kiss upon her brow in token of the renewal of his most solemn pledges, "now that thou art near me, and my fount of love is full, I begin to feel the dangers which may beset thee."

"Let us not think of danger now, my beloved," replied the youth. "This should be a season of joy and happiness unalloyed."

"Aye—but we should not forget that there is a future, and that we must be watchful of the joys to-day if we would have them with us henceforth."

"Thou art right, Ianthe. I will be watchful. I know there is danger in the way, but I fear it not."

"Procrastination" was the cause of the suicide of John S. Jones at the Smithsonian House, New York, on Tuesday, by laudanum; at least, so he stated in a note which he left behind him.—Post.

After Election.

It is generally remarked that you cannot tell what has happened till "after election." There was less doubt than usual, as to what had happened, and less time was required to determine it. The Post, as a matter of course, took the defeat coolly, and showed no signs of deep grief. No one should expect the Post to care much about any election except for federal officers, for it is only in such cases that it expects any increase of offices and salaries.—The Democratic party of Massachusetts ... long since learned that the interest of the Post in its success is measured by the pap to be made up at Washington. The Courier, however, takes its flogging to heart. It is dissolved in tears, not of penitence and remorse as it should be, but of mingled rage and disappointment. The Courier really expected, and tried, to elect John T. Heard to Congress. It thought that the lovely conjunction of the ... gravity of Pomp ... square, and the ... ed rabble of Ann street and Fort Hill would really be sufficient to consummate the degradation of Boston. We notice that the Hallowell Gazette puts in a special claim in honor of Gov. Hubbard as making the first public movement in behalf of the settlement of Aroostook. We do not like to disturb this local claim, but we would remind the Gazette that at an earlier period than the remarkable visit of Gov. Hubbard to the Aroostook, the Whig administration became much interested in the settlement of the Aroostook lands, as the reports of Hon. E. L. Hamlin as Land Agent will clearly prove. Dr Ezekiel Holmes was at that time appointed an agent to examine the Aroostook country and the report of his exploration was published and widely circulated, and continues to day as reliable and satisfactory information as to the soil and climate and the agricultural resources and topography of the lands there, as can be found. There are matters that ought not to be overlooked or ignored even for so good natured a thing as getting up credit or glorification of a neighbor. Dr Hubbard in his grand visit took heavy draughts, doubtless, of the delights of that beautiful country, and if he excelled in this, he is doubtless willing that due credit should be given to those who at an earlier day labored to make known to the world the merits of the Aroostook country, and to invite settlers to go in and occupy so choice a region.—Kennebec Journal.

Advertising, the Life of Business.

Some one has remarked that the true secret of successful advertising was to say enough to excite without satisfying the curiosity. There are volumes of sound practical wisdom in this suggestion. Too long or too intricate an advertisement defeats its own end. A judicious system of advertising is sure to bring a profitable return. Every number of a paper goes not only into a great many families, but the different members of the family have an opportunity to see it. Because a customer does not say he was directed to a particular shop by an advertisement, the merchant may think his money has been spent in vain, when perhaps numbers go to his shop daily by reason of some hint they have derived from the very advertisement from which he sees no return.—What steam has been to navigation advertising has been to trade. The man who advertises freely and liberally betrays a liberal and genial spirit which is pleasing to nine-tenths of his customers; while those who never advertise, who don't care for home papers, and take no pains to sustain themselves by sustaining home interests, prove themselves to be possessed of a narrowness of soul with which no one wishes to come in contact.

Jenny Lind's splendid triumph was owing to liberal advertising. But for advertising where to-day would Holloway, Brandreth, Townsend? where Oak Hall, Stewarts or the New York Ledger?—Bonner of the Ledger has paid thousands of dollars for a single advertisement in the New York Tribune, and he is coining money out of a two dollar paper of no extraordinary merit.—Exchange.

Glorious old Massachusetts. The full results of the glorious election in the old Bay State appear to be as follows, by the returns of the Boston Journal.

For Governor, Mr. Banks, (Republican) has 67,086 votes, Mr. Beach, (Dem.) 37,944; Mr Lawrence (straight American) 11,903. Banks' plurality 29,142, his clear majority 17,239.

The State Senate stands 37 Republicans, to 3 democrats. The House, 197 Republicans, 29 democrats, 10 straight Americans, and 4 to hear from.

A clean sweep is made of the Executive Councillors.

Our friends have carried every Congressional district, and by the following handsome pluralities—the aggregate majorities amounting to about the same as that for Mr. Banks.

In the First District, in all but five towns, Eliot has 3110 plurality.

In the Second District, Buffinton has 4146 plurality.

In the Third District, Adams has 2831 plurality.

In the Fourth District, Rice has 1646 plurality.

In the Fifth District, Burlingame has 445 plurality.

In the Sixth District, Alley has 3512 plurality over Loring and 1619 over Lord.

In the Seventh District, Gooch has 3237 plurality.

In the Eighth District, Train has 2521 plurality.

In the Ninth District, Thayer has 4362 plurality.

In the Tenth District, Delano has 4659 plurality.

In the Eleventh District, Dawes has 2052 plurality.

Dist I, John T Nixon, II, John N Stratton; III, Garret B Adrian, IV, Jetur R Riggs; V, William Pennington.

Adrian and Riggs, Anti-Lecompton Democrats, the rest Republicans. In the present delegation there are but two Republicans.

The Legislature is decidedly opposition, without counting the Anti-Lecompton Democrats, of whom five or six are chosen. The Senate (two-thirds holding over) is Democratic, 13 to 8, but three of the 13 are Anti-Lecompton, so it is believed that an Anti-Lecompton U S Senator will be chosen without difficulty.

In Illinois, although the Douglas democrats are reported as having carried the Legislature, the Republicans hold their own in the Congressional delegation. Four at least of the Congressmen elect are Republicans, and perhaps five—the State being entitled to nine.—Hon. E. B. Washburn is among the Republicans re elected.

Success of the Chinese Sugar Cane.—Notwithstanding the many predictions of failure, the cultivation of the Chinese Sugar Cane in this country bids fair to become a decided success—at least so far as the profitable production of an excellent and cheap syrup is concerned—thus competing with and lessening the price of Southern syrups and molasses, and of the ordinary cane sugar itself. It is now stated that throughout Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, the Chinese Sugar Cane has been most extensively cultivated during the past season, and with such results as promise to make "Sorghum" one of the staple products. The correspondent of the Portland Advertiser, writing home from Cincinnati, says that the syrup is found on the tables of the best hotels of the West, and equals the best New Orleans syrup in flavor. There is some difficulty as yet in finding a process for converting the molasses into well granulated and chrystalized sugar, but it is said some recent experiments in Northern Illinois have been attended with very favorable results. Should a cheap and ready process of obtaining the sugar be discovered, the results to the West and to the whole country will be most important and significant. There are intelligent persons in Illinois who do not hesitate to affirm that within the next five years the "Sorghum" crop of that State will be the most valuable one raised—exceeding that of any one of the cereals. The best syrup is now afforded for 50 cents a gallon.

New Publications.

We are indebted to the last named publishers for a copy of this interesting work, from the pen of the aged apostle of liberty, now about going to his rest. It is a circumstantial history of the "Maroons" or fugitive slaves, who, in large numbers, even in the early part of the last century fled from oppression in South Carolina and Georgia, and sought and obtained protection in Florida under the laws of its then Spanish government, and became landholders, and free subjects of the Spanish crown. In 1738 the Colonial government of South Carolina made a formal demand on the Spanish Governor of St. Augustine, for a surrender of these fugitive slaves. The demand was promptly rejected—but it was the commencement of a controversy which lasted for a century, and has caused a great expenditure of blood and treasure, more especially in the "Florida War" of our day. Mr. Giddings gives a brief account of the events of the last century, bearing upon the history of these fugitives and the hostilities pursued by Georgia and South Carolina to compel the Spanish government of Florida to restore them to their masters. He then details more minutely the manner in which the slaveholders in 1812 invaded Florida, and commenced the first Seminole war, and then caused the purchase and annexation of Florida in order to bring the exiles within the jurisdiction of the United States—how the latter still lived with and were protected by the Indians, and how the slaveholders then excited renewed Indian disturbances, caused the second bloody and expensive "Florida War," and used the power of the General Government to remove the Indians and exiles finally from their lands in Florida to the reservations beyond the Mississippi. The book is almost wholly historical, and embodies an amount of facts in regard to the history of Florida, and of the Seminole wars, not to be found in the same compass elsewhere.

The Higher Christian Life. By Rev. W. E. Boardman. Boston: Henry Hoyt—1858.

This is mainly a volume of religious experiences, selected from interesting and impressive narratives of personal history, as illustrations of the great principles of the gospel, and intended to bear upon the higher Christian life, or what the author denominates "second conversion." It contains racy sketches relating to many of the most eminent men of the age, and will probably have a wide circulation in the religious world.

A Memoir of the Life and Times of Rev. Isaac Backus, A. M. By Alvah Hovey, D. D. Boston, Gould & Lincoln. 1858.

This is a book which will be received with much interest by religious readers. The subject of the memoir, Rev. Isaac Backus, born at Norwich, Conn., Jan. 9, 1724, was one of the strong lights of the church in the last century, more especially as the author of "The Ecclesiastical History of New England" from an early period. He was one of the converts of that interesting period of New England church history known as the "Great Awakening," which took place about 1740, under the preaching of Whitefield, of Jonathan Edwards and others, and in which, as Trumbull informs us, "thirty or forty thousand souls were born into the family of heaven in New England." During this revival Whitefield, (having come from the field of his great successes in the Southern colonies) preached in New England with wonderful power,—extending his journeys as far eastward as York, in Maine. During this revival, as we have said, Mr. Backus was converted and joined the Congregational denomination—but soon afterwards became a Baptist, and has given us in his History a full account of the rise and progress of that branch of the church in this country. The volume is full of historical interest.

The Moral Discipline of Giving. This is the title of the Annual Sermon preached before the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at their meeting in Detroit in September last. It was delivered by Prof. Shepard of this city and has heretofore been alluded to by us as a powerful discourse, and one which elicited much favorable comment in the newspapers of the west at the time of its delivery. It has just been published in pamphlet form in Boston, and is for sale here by Mr. E. F. Duren. The favorable moral effects of the practice of benevolence are well demonstrated by the preacher.

Household Edition of Waverley. The November issue of Messrs. Ticknor & Field's beautiful Household Edition of Scott's Novels comprises "Woodstock" in two volumes, with elegant illustrations in the most exquisite engravings. The historical interest of this novel, centering mainly upon incidents connected with Cromwell and the English Protectorate, is equal to that of any of the series.

LOCAL AND MAINE NEWS.

The Steamer Daniel Webster came through Friday night from Portland, arriving about 10 A. M. on Saturday.

Launch at Brewer Village. The new brig "Aroostook," of about 300 tons, was launched Saturday, at Brewer Village. She is a good vessel, and will be commanded by Capt. Asher Peirce of Orrington, who, with Simon Moulton and Geo O Goodwin of Brewer, are the owners.

Conviction of William Webster. This notorious scoundrel, who has figured in our criminal courts for so long a time, was convicted of burglary before the Supreme Court at Ellsworth last week, and been sentenced to the State Prison for a term of four years. The burglary was in the robbing of Mr. Blodgett's store at Bucksport a few weeks since.

U S Commissioner's Court. The examination of Roswell F. Miller and John Miller, Jr, charged with robbing the mail east of this city in August last, and also in the month of October, as heretofore stated, was continued through the day on Saturday, before Mr Commissioner Rowe, in the United States Court room. Charles A Foster, who was under arrest for being connected with them, turned States evidence, and testified to having seen Roswell and John perpetrate the robbery in August, on the Miller Hill in Holden, about 4 miles from this city. One of the Millers got upon the rack and unfastened the straps, and handed the bag to the other, and then both carried it into the woods. Foster stated where John and himself got bills changed in this city which were robbed from letters. Mr E W Henton testified to having changed Province money for Miller and Foster. This money was from the letter from Mr Hemenway containing $150. The defence endeavored to prove that Roswell Miller was not present at the robbery. Geo Smith, the Mail Agent, is present, and Deputy Marshal Stanley, assisted by Messrs Bicknell and Walker.

The examination closed at about 6 o'clock on Saturday evening. Roswell F Miller was bound over in the sum of $1000 for trial at the December term of the District Court in Portland; and John N. Miller ordered to find bail in $3000 for appearance at the same time and place, and Chas. A Foster ordered to recognize in the same sum to appear as witness. Failing in which they were committed. Foster waived an examination on the charge against himself, and was held for trial.

Drowned. Uriah P. Turner of this city was knocked overboard by the main boom of a vessel, at Roberts & Hinkley's mill, on Saturday afternoon, and was drowned.

Police Court. On Saturday afternoon, John Feeny, Maurice Herrin, and Tim Mahoney, a precious set of rogues, were before the Police Court for breaking into D. M. Howard's store, on Exchange street, a few days since, and were bound over for trial, in the sum of $1000 each. For want of bail they were committed to jail.

Resignation of a Representative.—Wm. Chase, Esq., Representative elect from Portland, has sent in his resignation to the City authorities, in consequence of business engagements out of the country this winter. A new election is ordered on Thursday the 18th inst.

First Snow Storm of the Season.—After a cold rain storm, which prevailed during Saturday and Saturday night, about an inch of snow appeared on the ground on Sunday morning—the first of the season in this locality. Snow, rain and sleet continued through the day.

In consequence of the still prevailing storm, the steamer M. Sanford did not make her usual trip on Friday night, and, we understand, she will lay over in Boston until Tuesday night.

A seizure of liquor was made on Saturday forenoon by Marshal Farnham, at the establishment of W. K. & E. Miller, No 8, Exchange Street. It consisted of nine barrels and various smaller "packages" of different kinds. It awaits the action of his honor Judge Pratt, of the Police Court.

One of the Bears. Mr. Editor,—We have a bear story to tell, as well as our neighbors, and we don't intend to give in, on size, to any Oxford or Somerset bears that can be produced. On the 29th of October, a bear was discovered near the premises of Mr O Dow, in this town. In a short time the hunters were out, ready for the sport. The party consisted of W S Place, A T Luther W P Guppy, — Page, Capt Snow, and others, who were soon on the animal's track. Bruin was surrounded in a piece of woods, and the hunters closed in. Whichever way Bruin tried to escape, a bullet was received, and it was not until twenty shots had been fired that the victory was acknowledged, and the bear yielded to his pursuers. This bear, when dressed, weighed four hundred and fifty one pounds.—There is a rumor here that one of this bear's cubs was killed in Corinth last Sunday, probably by boys. Hunter.

Large Yield. The Oxford Democrat says that Mr A B Livy, of Gilead, has this year raised on two acres of ground, two hundred and forty bushels of ears good sound corn.—The kind of corn planted was the Farmington twelve rowed, which is said to be earlier than most kinds.

Consecration. It is expected that the new Episcopal Church, erected in Eastport during the past year, will be consecrated by the Rt Rev Bishop Burgess, on Wednesday the 10th inst. The sermon will be by the Bishop.

The Lumbering Business. The Machias Union says the appearances now indicate that one-third more lumbering will be done this year on Machias river than last.

Serious Accident. Alden Simmonds of Camden, who is endeavoring to make fast the schooner Chieftain to Pier No 7, East River, New York, on Wednesday morning, got one of his legs entangled in the hawser, and it was cut off. He was conveyed in a state of insensibility to the New York Hospital.

Pizarro's Toe on a Tramp. Our neighbor of the Union tells the following story. He appears to have no doubt of the genuineness of the relic presented for his inspection:

An Interesting Relic. We were, day before yesterday, shown by Mr Timothy McDonald, mate of the bark Damon, lately from Lima, a section of a toe of the great Pizarro, who flourished three centuries ago. Mr McDonald, with two of his friends, obtained access to the vault of the great Cathedral of Lima, where Pizarro lies embalmed. By liberally feeing their guide they were permitted to take away one of his toes which they divided among them. The body was in a tolerable state of preservation.

The Portland people held a very large levee Thursday evening, in Hon of Rev Mr Pratt, who is about leaving that city for Philadelphia. It was a pleasant gathering, and many pleasant speeches were made on the occasion.

A Hardened Criminal. Among the evidence against Rundlett, recently convicted at Farmington for assault with intent to murder, was that of Mr Wescott, City Marshal of Newburyport, who went into jail as a prisoner and occupied the cell with Rundlett for the purpose of finding out by this stratagem something about a bank robbery. Rundlett confessed his crimes to him. He told Mr Wescott that if he had succeeded in murdering the Welches, that he should have burned the barn and house; that in the morning there would have been a heap of ashes; that he should have been among the first to have gone with the neighbors the next morning to the spot. Said his object in going to the house was to obtain $2000, that he knew they had it and where it was.

Rundlett also said the he and others killed a man on a bridge near Readfield; cut his throat, took from him $1700 in money, and then buried him with his horse, wagon, harness, whip and buffaloes in one grave; and that all hell could not find them.

Rundlett was sentenced to 18 years in State Prison in each case, making thirty six years in all.

Thaddeus Richards, aged 7 years, a son of Mrs. Harriet Richards, of Hallowell, broke one of his thigh bones last week, by falling upon a paved side-walk. He was playing with other boys.

The Oxford Democrat says, that the cloth stolen from the Woolen Factory in Bethel, some days since, has been found in the woods.

The Alleged Railroad Frauds in Russia.—Defence of the American Contractors.—A statement has been going the rounds to the effect that a gigantic fraud against the Russian government had been discovered. Government had paid 112,000,000 roubles over charge for constructing the St Petersburg and Moscow railroad, the contractors charging for a much longer line than was really laid down. Mr Thomas Winans (one of the American contractors for the road) publishes a card in the New York papers, denying in the most positive manner, the truth of the statement. He says:

"It is quite probable that the observations of Prof. Struve, the astronomer, have established the fact that the true distance between St Petersburg and Moscow by a straight line is less than that by the line of the railway.—It would be strange, indeed, if it were otherwise. But it is difficult to conceive how the length of a circuitous railway between two distant points can be established by "calculations" made by an astronomer, "relative to the true geographical positions of those two places."

The misapplication of English words by foreigners is often very ludicrous. It is said that Dr Chalmers once entertained a distinguished guest from Switzerland, whom he asked if he would be helped to some kippered salmon.—The foreign divine asked the meaning of the uncouth word kippered, and was told that it meant preserved. The poor man, in a public prayer soon after, offered the petition that the distinguished divine might long be "kippered to the Free Church of Scotland."

Sale of United States Cents.—Mr Edward Cogan, coin dealer, of Philadelphia, sold on Monday, a collection of 77 rare United States cents for the aggregate sum of $128 68. A fine Washington cent of 1791, large eagle, brought $10, an extremely rare die of Washington cent, 1792, sold for $23 60; and an extremely fine, 1793, ring, or link, cent, $12 50. The other specimens in the collection found purchasers at prices ranging from $1 25 to $7 25 each.

Various Items.

The New York hackmen are now licensed and wear badges, and are obliged to carry cards, which they must present to each "fare," giving their number, address, and a reference to the Mayor's office, so that persons aggrieved may know where to apply for redress.

A man in New York has made a good living by advertising for a partner in the grocery business, to put in a small capital and serve as a clerk at a large salary. He shows a fine stock of goods, and after the money is paid the incoming partner and clerk finds that the hams are painted bags filled with saw-dust, the sugar barrels, except a small coating on the top, are filled with the same article, and the bottles and barrels labelled cognac brandy, bay rum, &c., contain only water.

Henry Ward Beecher's congregation, finding their church too small are preparing to build a new one at a cost of $175,000.

A Yankee physician named Bates, from Ashfield, Mass., has established himself and is doing a good business in Hakodadi, Japan.

Baked Ice.—One of the army of occupation at Canton writes: "In China they bake ice. An ice is enveloped in a crust of delicate pastry, and introduced into the oven. The paste is quickly baked, and the ice is still unmelted, having been protected from the heat by its envelope; and thus the epicure has the delight of biting through a burning crust, and then immediately cooling his palate with the grateful contents."

Oldest Methodist Church in America.—The first Methodist church in America was erected nearly a century ago, in John Street, New York, and was dedicated by the venerated Bishop Asbury, on the 31st of October, 1768. On Sunday, last the congregation worshiping in the church built on the site of the old one celebrated the anniversary.

Big Chimneys.—The chimney at Bolton, Eng., mentioned the other day, is not the highest in the world, although a hundred feet taller than the Charlestown structure. There is one near Manchester, Eng., that is 430 feet high, while the chimney shaft of the St Rollox chemical works, at Glasgow, is twenty feet higher still, being 450 feet high; and a yet larger one is in course of construction at Glasgow, for a chemical manufactory. It is to be 460 feet high, or nearly twice as tall as the Charlestown chimney, which is 239 feet high. In order to secure its solidity and strength, the constructor is building into the centre of the brick work at every stage of twenty five feet a malleable iron ring 3½ inches broad and ¼ of an inch in thickness. The mortar used is of a peculiar character. The foundation was built of Irish lime, ironstone, Arden lime, and sand, forming a cement impervious to damp. The rest of the shaft is to be built with mortar of a similar description, with the exception of the Arden lime.—Boston Journal.

Horrible Murder.—We see by the Cincinnati papers that a most brutal murder was committed in that city on Saturday evening, in a house of ill-fame. Three young men visited the house early in the evening, and in a very short time after they entered one of them murdered one of the females in a most fiendish manner. The name of the murderer is Charles Cook, son of a wealthy and highly respected citizen, and, like young Goaldy, had plenty of money at his command, and was idle, and hence this issue. The Cincinnati Commercial says

"Young Cook is about twenty five years of age, and although he has been furnished with a liberal education, he has never profited by it; but, on the contrary, he is said to have positively refused attempting any description of employment which might place him in an independent or honorable position. It was natural that he should fall into evil company, and this was another source of anxiety to his parents and family."

SPECIAL NOTICES.

DR. P. P. QUIMBY

Having made arrangements to visit Augusta and Portland, would say to his friends in Bangor and vicinity that his stay in the city will be limited to two weeks from this date, therefore all persons who desire to consult him, and those having unsettled accounts with him are requested to call. Notice to Builders.

SEALED PROPOSALS directed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Proposals for erecting a Court House for the County of Aroostook," will be received at the office of Benj. L. Staples Clerk of the Courts, in Houlton Me, until 12 o'clock noon, of the 11th day of December next, for furnishing all materials and doing all labor requisite to erect the aforesaid structure upon a portion of the site of the Jail lot in Houlton, in accordance with plans and specifications prepared by Gridley J. F. Bryant, Architect, which plans may be seen, and copies of the specifications may be obtained, at the office of said architect, No 4 Court street, Boston from Nov 6th to Nov 13th, and at the office of Charles W. Goddard, Esq., in Lewiston, Maine from Nov 15th to Nov 23d, and at the office of Benj. L. Staples in Houlton, Me, from Nov 25th to Dec 11th, 1858.

Notice to the persons whose bids may be accepted will not be given until 12 o'clock, noon, of the 15th day of December, and the Commissioners hereby reserve to themselves the right to reject any or all bids received under this notice, if in their judgment the interest of the County they represent requires them so to do.

All proposals must be made in accordance with the requirements of the 'form' attached to the specifications, copies of which will be delivered with that paper.

The building may be commenced as early as the frost of the spring of 1859 will permit and must be completed on or before November 1, 1859.

DR. CUTTER'S

IMPROVED

Chest Expanding

SKIRT SUSPENDERS!

THESE are for the purpose not only of expanding the chest and improving the figure, but also for carrying the whole weight of the skirts. It is well known that nervous diseases and weaknesses are brought on by the foolish fashion prevalent among ladies of wearing the whole weight of their skirts about their hips. With this article any number of skirts may be worn without injury to the health, they in fact embrace all the advantages of the stay and corset, without any of their evils.

Parents, look to your Children!

These Braces are almost indispensable to children, as they are liable to contract the habit of stooping and shrugging their shoulders at school, causing them to grow narrow chested, and laying the foundation for consumption and lung diseases. Parents should bear this in mind as wearing one of these Braces will alleviate the difficulty in a very short time.

☞Botanic Medical Office.

To the Afflicted.

DR. W. F. PADELFORD, Office at No. 1 Lewis Block, Main Street Bangor, may be consulted on all diseases incident to the Human Frame. Dr. P. gives particular attention to diseases of the Urinary Organs and all diseases of a private nature in both sexes. His great success in those long standing and difficult cases, such as were formerly considered incurable, is sufficient to commend him to the public as worthy the extensive patronage he has received, therefore persons afflicted with Diseases of the above nature, no matter how difficult or long standing the case may be, would do well to call on Dr. Padelford, at his office, and if not effectually relieved no remuneration will be required for his services. Rooms adapted for the privacy of patients. The poor advised free of charge. Physicians or patients wishing his opinion or advice, by letter, and enclosing the usual fee ($1 00) will be answered by return mail. DR. W. F. PADELFORD.

American & Foreign Patents.

R. H. EDDY,

SOLICITOR OF PATENTS,

76 State St., opposite Kilby St., BOSTON

AFTER an extensive practice of upwards of twenty years continues to secure Patents in the United States; also, in Great Britain, France, and other foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Bonds, Assignments, and all Papers or Drawings for Patents, executed on liberal terms, and with despatch. Researches made into American or Foreign works, to determine the validity or utility of Patents or Inventions—and legal or other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any Patent furnished by remitting One Dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington.

The Agency is not only the largest in New England, but through it inventors have advantages for securing Patents, of ascertaining the patentability of inventions, unsurpassed by, if not immeasurably superior to any which can be offered them elsewhere. The Testimonials below given prove that none is MORE SUCCESSFUL AT THE PATENT OFFICE than the subscriber, and as SUCCESS IS THE BEST PROOF OF ADVANTAGES AND ABILITY, he would add that he has abundant reason to believe, and can prove, that at no other office of the kind are the charges for professional services so moderate. The immense practice of the subscriber during twenty years past, has enabled him to accumulate a vast collection of specifications and official decisions relative to patents. These, besides his extensive library of legal and mechanical works, and full accounts of patents granted in the United States and Europe, render him able, beyond question, to offer superior facilities for obtaining Patents.

All necessity of a journey to Washington, to procure a patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

American Safety Paper Manufacturing Company of N. Y.

Capital $500,000.

A. NICHOLAS, President. Office, 40 Wall st.

A Perfect Security against all manner of Fraud or Counterfeiting on Paper—To Prevent Photographs and Anastatic Counterfeits, Erasures, Transfers or Alterations.

HAVING purchased the Patent for the exclusive right to manufacture and sell the Chemical Paper in America, invented and patented in England by HENRY GLYNN, a celebrated chemist and officer in the British army, it is hardly necessary to say that the Paper is recommended by Mr Kent, Assayer of the U. S. Mint, Mr Lyman of the New York Clearing House, and Meade Brothers, 233 Broadway, N. Y. The latter say that no imitation can be made on a check or bank note printed on the Safety Paper. Below is our list of prices.

Bank Checks—75 cts per lb.
Bank Bills—$18 for 1000 sheets.
Bills of Exchange—$25 for 1000 sheets.
Promissory Notes—40 cts per lb.
Sight and Time Drafts—$25 for 1000 sheets.
Insurance Policies—40 cts per lb.
Railroad Stocks and Bonds—40 cts per lb.
Bank and State Stocks—40 cts per lb.
Bonds and Mortgages—40 cts per lb.
Wills and Deeds—40 cts per lb.

For wrapping Silks and other fine articles it is excellent, as it prevents moths. 40 cts. a lb.

All State and County Records should always be printed or written on this paper, as the chemicals inserted in the pulp not only prevents erasure or transfer, but makes it lasting, as time will not destroy it.

For Southern climates it is excellent, and much superior to any other, as the moisture of the climate does not destroy it,—the properties inserted in the pulp being a preventive. In all the Southern States, Cuba, the West Indies and the Central American States, no public records can be kept over 20 years, written on the ordinary paper, while the oils and other chemicals inserted in this paper makes it indestructible by the ravages of time. It is also proof against moths, rats and other vermin, which feed on and destroy all other paper now in use.

The Company have now in operation Mills in Morris County, N. J., of about 300 Horse power and are able to fill all orders for Paper at the shortest notice.

LINCOLN'S WATER PROOF BLACKING,

AND LEATHER PRESERVATIVE.

Keep your feet dry and you will seldom need a Physician.

IS it not a truth that when the feet are often wet, it is one of the greatest causes of colds and consumption? It is a truth that when leathers often get wet and dried, it soon becomes hard, stiff, and cracks, but when its water proof this is removed. By the application of this preservative, it remains soft, and entirely impervious to water.

After being engaged for 25 years in the manufacture of Leather in all its branches, and being often troubled with wet feet myself, I was led to experimenting on different compositions, and found it easy to make it water proof, but at the same time extremely injurious to the leather. At last by a chemical process, I discovered a preparation which perfectly harmonizes with the astringent properties with which leather is tanned. It will not only make leather water proof, but it likewise softens the leather, and it will Positively wear twice as long.

I have now used it for three years and a large part of that time have worked in a wet Tannery with my boots constantly in water, and have not had my feet wet during that time. I can therefore in all confidence, recommend it to the public as the best article in the market.
